About the Library

In 1956, Denver commissioned a new building with the help of Burnam Hoyt. This new building provided more than double the amount of space that the original 1910 Denver Carnegie library (still stands today as the McNichols Civic Center Building) had provided. However, due to a rapidly increasing population, a bigger structure would be needed to house Denver's growing collection of books. In 1990, Michael Graves answered the call by designing a new library for the burgeoning city. It became the Denver Central Library. Today, six public floors serve our diverse Denver community and visitors offering children, teens and adults a place of wonder and discovery.

MISSION

Together, we create welcoming spaces where all are free to explore and connect.

VALUES

WELCOMING:

We make our resources, services, and expertise accessible for all, recognize the inherent dignity in each person, and provide safe places where everyone can be themselves.

CURIOSITY:

We foster a culture of exploration, innovation, and forward thinking by creating environments that support learning and growth.

CONNECTION:

We are neighbors. We foster relationships, listen and act to build and strengthen our community. We bring people together to share information, ideas, and experiences.

EQUITY:

We work to change inequitable practices, structures and policies, and attitudes that drive them, to provide opportunities for every person in our community to thrive. As we do so, we actively examine our roles in perpetuating oppressive systems.

STEWARDSHIP:

We are accountable to our community, using our resources responsibly. We lead with honesty and integrity, protect privacy and preserve and share the full history of our Denver community.

The Denver Central Library offers stunning spaces, thoughtful amenities, and is located in the heart of the city.

Our versatile library event spaces are perfect for everything from community gatherings and author talks, to celebrations, corporate receptions, and intimate dinners.

By booking your event at the Denver Central Library, you are supporting our mission: to create welcoming spaces where all are free to explore and connect.
